Rank Extortion.

An instance of the way in which the simplest problems in mathematics sometimes present strange difficulties is told by an eyewitness of an amusing incident in a New England street car. An old lady handed the conductor a 10 cent piece which was Canadian money. The conductor handed the old lady a 5 cent piece, not discovering at the moment the character of the coin he had received.

As soon as he saw his mistake, he turned back and said, "Lady, I am sorry, but we are not allowed to take Canadian money." And so saying he handed her the 10 cent piece.

"Are you sure that's my money?" asked the old lady sharply.

"Yes, ma'am, and I'm sorry I made the mistake," said the conductor.

"Oh, I'm willing to take it back, if you're sure it's mine," returned his passenger obligingly, slipping the dime into her pocketbook.

"And your fare, please, ma'am," said the conductor respectfully, after a pause.

"What? Why, I don't see how you calculate that. It's real mixin to me," said the old lady, flushing, as she took the identical 5 cent piece which she had received as change and handed it to the conductor

"Well, but, ma'am, I haven't had your fare yet," said the conductor patiently. "Don't you see how it is?"

"No, young man, I don't," said the old lady, looking severely at him, "but rather than have any talk about it, I'll give you another 5 cents."

She counted out five pennies and poured them into his hand; then she replaced her pocketbook in her bag and sank back into her seat with very red cheeks.

"Do you see how he figgered it, child?" she said, turning helplessly to the young woman next to her a moment later. "I shouldn't want to bandy words with him, for arithmetic never was my strong point, but seems to me it was real extortion. There was 20 cents I had to give him before he was anyway satisfied, but I suppose he knows how he figgered it!"—Youth's Companion.

Not Complimentary.

A lady looking at a painting in an art gallery was observed by a very small "homely" man who stood near to have a beetle crawling on the back of her dress. The man stepped up from behind the lady and said quite abruptly:

"Beg pardon, ma'am, but you have a little animal at your back."

The lady jumped, more at the man than at the beetle, and then said apologetically:

"Oh! I didn't know you were there."—Youth's Companion.

THE UNION MEETINGS

MORE AND MORE INTEREST BEING SHOWN NIGHTLY.

The Congregation at the Epworth M. E. Church Last Night Tested the Capacity of the House—Mr. Potter's Sermon.

The Epworth M. E. church was filled with another large congregation Friday night and a most interesting meeting was held, many ladies and gentlemen present bearing testimony when and where they were converted.

It was announced that there would be no services today and that there would be the regular Sunday school and church services Sunday morning but that an union meeting would be held at 2:30 and again at 7 [illegible] in the evening at the Epworth M. E. church with an overflow meeting in the evening at the Free Baptist church, the latter to be conducted by Mr. Miller.

At the Sunday afternoon meeting Mr. Potter will speak on the necessity of the new birth. In the evening Mr. Miller rendered "I am Sweeping Through the Gates," and Mr. Potter arose to proceed with his sermon.

Taking his text from Exodus 12:13, "When I see the blood I will pass over it," he said, after admonishing the congregation not to look up when any one came in as it not only embarrassed them but disconcerted him, "this is a part of the verse, the entire verse reading—'and the blood shall be to you for a token upon the houses where ye are: and when I see the blood, I will pass over you, and the plague shall not be upon you to destroy you, when I smite the land of Egypt.'

"'When I see the blood I will pass over you.' Our text approaches God's last great act in the redemption of the children of Israel from the bonds of Egypt.

"For four centuries this had been foretold. The prophecy is about to be fulfilled. Nine plagues had fallen on the Egyptians but with flint-like heart they had refused to let God's chosen go and now the last was about to fall and all the first born of Egypt were to die.

"That the blow might not fall on the first born of Israel, God said to Moses 'on the tenth day of this month each man of Israel shall take of a lamb's blood and strike with it on the lintels for I will pass through Egypt and smite the first born of the men and beasts of Egypt. I am the Lord and the blood shall be for a token and when I see the blood I shall pass over and the plague shall not come to you when it passes over Egypt.'

"The lamb was slain in every Israelite home and its blood was sprinkled with a branch of hyssop on the lintel.

"I remarked that the blood as we behold it in fancy speaks of judgment impending—the blood was the dividing line between Egpyt and Israel. The blood, you see, marked the line. Eternal life on one side and death on the other.

"I doubt not that many a proud, patrician Egyptian smiled as he saw the Israelites sprinkle the blood on the door and we may see men laugh in this day but it is a dangerous thing to do, as evidenced by this scene in Egypt, for in all that land there wasn't an Egyptian home where a first-born did not lie dead. There comes a time when the smiles of the world must fade away like the morning mists before a summer sun.

"You remember Ethan Allen, the great infidel, and how, when his daughter lay dying she asked him 'shall I go into the great future believing as you have taught me or as my mother has taught me?' allowed his parental love to move him to say 'you'd better believe as your mother taught you.'

"How many have testified that they found Jesus at the bedside of a dying father or mother or child? I remember the case of one lady who told me that she had spurned the bible, but when her first-born had passed out of time into eternity she stood by the little form she loved so dearly, she put her arms around it and kissed its frozen lips and she promised then and there that by the help of God she'd meet her little one within the gates of pearl.

"Young friend, that blood sprinkled in the land of Goshen speaks to us tonight and I say to you this Friday night that every drop of blood which flowed that Friday afternoon from feet and hands and side of that immortal One speaks to us tonight. But not only does the blood as we behold it tonight speak to us of the Egyptian but of our freedom from bondage and from the path of the destroying angel.

"The application of Christ's blood to our hearts tonight by faith delivers first from the devil and then entitles us to sight of the saints of light.

"As to protection from the destroying angel, the first-born of Israel were as safe as Daniel in the den of lions or the Hebrews in the fiery furnace—as safe as the arm of a mighty Jehovah could make them—but it was conditional upon their being sprinkled with the blood and know that if you, my erring friend, cling to the blood that was shed for you then you are safe and neither demons nor devils can do you harm. Take not the word of another but know thou that the blood of Jesus Christ is on thy heart tonight.

"The lamb had been slain that the first born might live. The first born might have said, "This innocent lamb dies that I might live, but I turn to Corinthians and find that Christ was sacrificed that we may live. He tasted [illegible] The Messiah dies for sins not his own. It is finished. Justice is satisfied. The great atonement is made that grace to sinners may [illegible]

"But let me warn you that this substitution will not avail you unless you are sheltered in it. I believe that [illegible] of the kingdom of [illegible]

"If any man has not the spirit of Christ he is not of Him, no matter what his professions are. Christ's sacrifice then will not avail you unless you are sheltered by the blood.

"I fancy that the first born in every household of Israel at midnight must have gone to his father and said 'Am I safe?' I saw you kill the lamb and sprinkle the blood and I'm safe. I will go out and see how the Egyptians are getting along.' The father would say as he sprang to close the door, 'Never pass that door; outside the door is death.' And I would remind you [illegible]

"[illegible] the blood speaks of God's great estimate of the value of thy soul [illegible]

"Do you know that our appreciation of a friend in need is often best estimated by what we would do for that friend? But can we estimate God's great love thus? I have known of the sacrifices of the parent. I have known of a widow almost working herself to death to provide for her little ones, but the more we dwell upon such illustrations to show the mercy and love of God the more are we confounded. For God was a father. He had a son, a well beloved son who had been with him during the cycles of eternity and He loved that son.

"Touch the mother's child and she will spring to protect it. But what do I read? 'God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son that whosoever should believe on Him should have everlasting life.'

"God sent that beloved Son here to wear the crown of thorns. I want to ask you a question: Business men, young men, young women, what has been the expression of your gratitude for the precious boon of the gift of His Son? At the midnight hour, at the side of a sick or dying friend, did you ever yet get down on your knees and looking up say 'Father, oh Father, I thank Thee that Thou hast sent Jesus to bridge the chasm that divides my soul from Thee?' Did you ever at midnight look up into that face that bore the thorns and say 'Oh, Jesus, I thank Thee for the scars on Thy side, in Thy hands, on Thy feet, that Thou didst give that I might have eternal life?' Did you? Why not? Why such heartless ingratitude?

"Sinner, what would you take for your hope in Jesus? You say—'I have no hope.' Then what would you take to have the hope, you hope you have, blotted out? Thoughtless as you are, careless as you have been—would you take the cattle on a thousand hills, the gold of the earth, the earth itself? I think you would say 'No! Let my right hand forget its cunning, my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth, but take not from me that hope.'

"Let me remind you that time is dying; that judgment is coming. What will you do?"

Mr. Potter then related an incident concerning a young lady who scoffed at religion during his stay at Marshalltown, Ia., who died within twenty-four hours thereafter, and another incident of a man at Rock Island who scoffed at the blood theory, but within two weeks cried out on his death bed: "Did I say too much blood? Did I say too much blood? O, for one drop of Jesus' blood to cleanse my heart from sin."

The sermon was closed with various tests, after which the congregation was dismissed, those who had gone forward and any who were especially interested being requested to remain, so many taking advantage of the invitation that the church proper was well filled and a most interesting meeting of prayer was held.

The opinion gains ground that the Dow bill will pass the house without amendment. A good many house members [illegible] that a higher rating of the tax [illegible] will be sufficient [illegible] would willingly accept such an increase [illegible] no one thinks that the tax will be increased to more than [illegible] of a little time the temperance people will want the tax raised again, even then it would be well to have some reserve to fall back on, for anything over [illegible] would set on the line of prohibition and away from the idea of [illegible] Whether the senate would accept such an amendment as it is thought the house will make is another matter. There is a remote possibility that if the bill goes to flying back and forth between the two houses it may [illegible] and the tax be left [illegible] if the house delays action until a late day of the session.

It is evident that the Democrats are making a strong play for the favor of the liquor interests. Every Democrat in the senate opposed the Dow tax increase, and Mr. Ressell resorted to every possible filibustering device to prevent the bill from going to vote.

There is a most extraordinary lack of interest on the part of Democrats in politics. They do not seem to take any concern in the situation or to care to change the situation, such as it is. BEAUTIFUL AND STRONG!

The Greatest American Prima Donna Made Well by Paine's Celery Compound.

There was never a remedy so highly recommended as Paine's celery compound.

There was never a remedy in such universal demand.

For it makes people well!

Every one among the thousands who have been delighted by the beautiful songs of Boma, the great prima donna, recognize in her one of the world famous singers.

Born in California, she graduated with honors at Eastern musical colleges, and on her return to the coast, became the first prima donna at the Tivoli Opera House in San Francisco.

It was while making the tour with the famous Marine Band of Washington last season, the beautiful Boma felt the strain of travel, hurry, and work, yet in the evening she greeted great audiences with smiles and electrified them with her voice. Could she have done this without her nerves were steadied and her strength built up by Paine's celery compound? She says:

"In Paine's celery compound I find a very much long-felt want for the worries and exhaustive cares attendant upon an active professional life. Paine's celery compound brings restful strength to body and mind, invigorating the system and prolonging life."

Paine's celery compound has made thousands of people well. It has saved thousands of women from nervous prostration. It has made the weak strong. It has cured where everything else failed. Innumerable testimonials as to its wonderful value have been voluntarily sent to Wells & Richardson Co., who prepare it in Burlington, Vermont.

Paine's celery compound is the most remarkable remedy for the blood and nerves, known to the 19th century. It is employed by the foremost physicians in curing kidney and liver troubles and the diseases due to nervous disorders, faulty nutrition, and impoverished blood, producing results that seem little short of the miraculous.

Paine's celery compound builds up the system, purifies the blood, regulates the nerves. The weak and worn-out soon find their frames invigorated, their spirits raised, and their strength renewed.

It makes people well.

It is as superior to the ordinary nervines, bitters, and sarsaparillas as strength is better than weakness.

Undignified For a Statesman.

It is said that a woman remembers a man whom she has known well as a little boy always as the little boy and never can think of him as grown up. This saying seems to be borne out to a certain extent at least by an amusing story told in connection with the appointment of M. Edouard Lockroy as minister of marine in France.

When M. Lockroy was a small boy, his father lived in a house in the street in Paris which now bears the name of Washington. His home was in the fifth story of this building, and it appears that he had certain habits which rendered him objectionable to the other residents of the building, particularly to the concierge, or woman who looked out for the door. He found [illegible] a most expeditious way of coming down from the fifth floor [illegible] by the stairs.

CAREER OF A PRODIGAL.

Sam Tetlow, Who Scattered Wealth With a Lavish Hand, Reduced to Husks at Last.

Sam Tetlow, once a popular and prosperous theatrical manager who spent money with a prodigal hand and counted his friends by hundreds, is in a San Francisco almshouse.

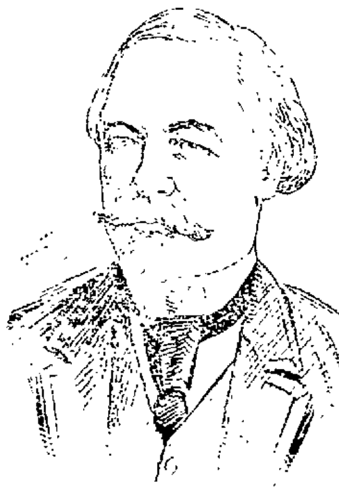
Tetlow went to California in the early fifties. He was a young mechanic, and his skill brought him profit and proper consideration in the mines. After working a few months at his trade he became a prospector, and as such he laid the foundation for the fortunes he acquired and lost in his career as a theatrical manager. It was not long, however, before the gambling tables had more attraction for him than labor with pick and cradle. In a few months he became notorious as one of the most reckless of the plungers at any of the numerous games of chance then operating in this city. Luck seemed to be always with him, and he amassed a considerable fortune.

About that time the pioneers began to appreciate the fact that they lacked a theater. Tetlow saw his chance, and the Bella Union was built at his suggestion. He became the manager, and for years it prospered beyond the dreams of avarice.

During the zenith of his prosperity Tetlow became the owner of the property now known as Sutro Heights. A man named Merchant owned the property. It comprised about 40 acres, with a little hut on it overlooking the sea. Tetlow saw the shanty on the grand bluff, and he wanted it. He quietly purchased the place, and there he lived. He made some improvements to the house, laid out a garden and enjoyed his purchase.

He owned a team that no one could pass on the smooth road out to the cliff, and no Welsh baron could have extended more generous hospitality than he bestowed from his house overlooking the sea. Sam Tetlow of the Heights was a dashing fellow at that time, even if he had reached middle age. He was the most lordly "high roller" among all the "high rollers" of California. In every country town he visited every man was his guest as long as he stayed. At Los Angeles, where he stopped a few days after visiting Santa Catalina island, for improving which he and James Lick had a plan, a four horse coach stood constantly at the door of the hotel ready for his whim. To Antioch he once went on a business trip. The next time he visited the town the local band played him a greeting. On his travels he bought the bars that all might drink at his expense, and he never took any change. He was the prince prodigal wherever he stepped.

Then came a season of trouble for Tetlow. A beloved daughter died at the house on the Heights. The place lost its charm to the owner. He sold it to Adolph Sutro, now the mayor of San Francisco.



SAM TETLOW.

Shortly after that deal Tetlow quarreled with his partner, William Skeantlebury. The quarrel lasted nearly a week, both men growing more bitter toward each other every day. Finally they met in the bar of the theater. Some bad words passed. Skeantlebury struck Tetlow. There was a scuffle, a pistol shot and Tetlow stood, with a revolver in his hand, a murderer.

That was about 16 years ago. There was a long trial, and Tetlow was sentenced to be hanged. His wife was energetic in his behalf, and the day of execution was postponed two or three times. After months had passed a new trial was granted and the jury brought in a verdict acquitting him of the crime on the ground of self defense.

When Tetlow stepped from the jail he was a poor man. His fortune had been spent in his defense. The theater had passed into other hands. To add to his misfortune, his wife, who had been his adviser, and who really managed his business ventures, died.

This made a great change in his affairs. He rode in no more four in hands. No brass bands blared when he approached. He was lucky if he had an umbrella when it rained. In the daytime he peddled lottery tickets to men who used to approach him with sycophantic servility, and at night, tired and weary, he went wearily to a little room in the top floor of a sinister old building near the custom house, where he was greeted by two little grandchildren, who put the sunshine into his darkened life. But even that poor shelter was lost to him, and, broken in health, he was obliged to apply to the county hospital.

BILL NYE ON POETRY.

A BOOKLET WITH POETIC FEET THAT ARE NOT MATES.

The Humorist Gives an Object Lesson by Dropping Into Rhyme Himself, and Also Explains the Etiquette of Cards. Other Suggestions For the Society Novice.

[Copyright, 1896, by Edgar W. Nye.]

A cheery little poem of 221 verses comes to this office reeking with diverse allusions from the job office at Vevay, Ind. It is in the form of a booklet and looks some like Peter Henderson's Seed Catalogue For 1896.

The title to this work is "Recollections of School Days." The only good feature about the work is that it is not a plagiarism on James Whitcomb Riley. It is more like Owen Meredith, I think.

The poetic feet, however, are not mates. Every little while you find a foot of size 9 with a D width, while the next one will have a C width and be much higher in the instep.

SCANNING MISMATCHED POETIC FEET.

It runs along something like "Lucile." No pun is intended here. Poetic feet and "Lucile" have no concealed humorous connection.

The author's rhyme is a little bit free also. This is a fair sample of the style:

The schoolhouse was small, and the benches were long,
As also the desks where the big scholars were strung,
While in front sat us "small fry," with feet dangling down,
Each with a Webster's Elementary, then the greatest book known.

Poetry should not be sacrificed to sense, neither should sense be sacrificed to poesy. First, the poet should have something to say, and then he should say it at an early date.

Another little book has been sent to me for review, published in "Baltimore, M. D.," as the author calls it. It is written by "Bishop, the Bird Man" of Baltimore, as he calls himself. It is a treatise on the care of birds, but incidentally he gets in some good pieces to speak and other literature of a high class.

On page 59 he gives us a poem called "A Miller's Love." In a footnote on the same page he says:

"This song is arranged for baritone solo and soprano accompaniment. The air is in Tyrolese style, with a warbling chorus, and when properly sung at evening parties or private entertainments is always appreciated and applauded.

"Will be sent on receipt of ten 2 cent postage stamps."

Here are three of the first stanzas:

A MILLER'S LOVE.

[By Bishop, the Bird Man.]

In a land far away, by the side of a stream,
There stood an old mill of which I oft dream.

The old miller's daughter, a maiden named Clyde,
Was my only love and intended bride.

I bade her farewell, to seek fortune and fame,
Kissed tears from her cheeks, and she did the same.

So it would seem that Clyde was somewhat of a contortionist. We have always heard of the wonderful beauty of the Baltimore girls, but their agility has never before, I think, been suitably embalmed in song.

It is not often that I drop into rhyme, but where I can thus express a great truth, and in that form, I may be pardoned perhaps for doing so. I do not idealize so much in my verse, but prefer rather to express with great force some grand idea.

I love nature, as all true poets must, and would be glad to paint a rhythmic picture with the verbal coloring of a Byron, but that is not where my great gift lies. I am better fitted to write in a spirited yet direct and descriptive way and should be classed more in the group of poets to which Bryant belonged. Bryant was a practical man and very thrifty and economical. It is said that when an editor those who wrote at space rates for him always found on Saturday that quotations of two lines even were not paid for, and if quoted from himself he credited his own account with that much.

The verses given below resemble the style of Longfellow, and yet the great idea contained in them is my own. While there is a touch of sadness in the first three stanzas, the correct thing is not, on the whole, sacrificed to euphony or poetic construction.

FOOTSTEPS.

Years ago the poet told us we could
Make our lives sublime
And departing leave behind us
Footprints on the sands of time.

[illegible]

Again it becomes necessary to [illegible] to the [illegible] of card etiquette.

Where great formality is required, visiting cards should not be carried in the pocket with a loose smoking tobacco.

Announcement cards should be all printed before the wedding, so that they may be sent as soon as the ceremony is over. In case there should be a postponement or adjournment of the marriage, the announcement cards, together with postage, may be charged to the groom. Ice cream also may be put into the bill for damages in case of breach of promise.

A girl who has not yet come out should not have visiting cards. Girls who have appeared in the roughly full evening dress are supposed to have come out.

Girls are not allowed to have cards after their second season. Prior to that time the fly leaf of a hymnbook will be found to do very well.

Where one is making formal calls on one's friends and where there are gentlemen in the house, one should leave one of one's own cards for each lady and one of one's husband's cards for each person in the house on whom one's husband would have called had he come, but if one's husband is absent in Dakota and liable never to return one may use one's own discretion about leaving one's husband's cards.

You should not get your "at home" cards mixed up with the visiting cards.

Visiting cards cannot be satisfactorily renovated with benzine.

A telephone number should never be put on a visiting card, nor should rates for board, in case one keeps summer boarders, be engraved on the card. It is in shocking taste and among the nobility is regarded with abhorrence.

After a tea one should call on the hostess at an early date, and one card should be left. Where cake was served with the tea, one should leave two cards.

Where friends call in a hired conveyance or by street car, the call may be returned by mailing the usual cards.

In cases where callers occupy the time by reciting the bright sayings of their own children, instead of listening to my recital of what my children have said, I return their calls by messenger boy, "collect."

Where one starts out to make a call in one's carriage and meets the people on whom one had started to call, an exchange of cards may be made from one carriage to the other, and the question of who should make the first subsequent call may be settled on the spot by a friendly game of "old sledge."

In calling upon the president of the United States one need not leave a card for each member of the cabinet.

It is in execrable taste to put a purple bronze stamp on your visiting cards, as it is also to ask your hostess to preserve and return any unsoiled cards of your own which she may have at the end of the season.

If a gentleman calls at your house at 2 o'clock in the morning in order to return your husband from the club, you need not return the call unless a friendly acquaintance should spring up at the time and one which it might be agreeable to cultivate.

Where one's house takes fire and neighbors rush in to save the furniture, one card each for the host and hostess will be sufficient on entering.

In case of a large surprise party every one should send cards one week in advance, so that the host may know where to send bills for food, groceries and shade trees to which horses are tied during the festivities.

If you are at home and your maid or footman should bring you a card that you do not like, you may draw another.

Gentlemen callers, representing a new and especially fascinating lightning rod, need leave but two cards, one for the host and one for the hostess.

A gentleman caller who remains later than 11 o'clock p. m. should put the hour of his departure on his card, so that at the end of the month his gas account may be arranged without haggling and acrimony.

The skeleton in many a household is the peculiar weakness of the wife and mother, or of the wife who ought to be a mother and is not. Happiness is destroyed by the presence of the secret sickness that may lurk like a grinning death among the most luxurious homes. The most terrible thing about this condition of affairs is that it is entirely needless. There is no reason in the world why every woman in the world should not be strong and healthful and capable of fulfilling her whole duty as a wife and mother. Many women go on month after month, and year after year, becoming weaker and weaker because of a very natural hesitancy they feel in consulting a physician. They know that if they go to a doctor for treatment, the first thing he will insist on will be examination and local treatment. [illegible] Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription cures positively, perfectly, permanently all varieties of female weakness and disease. It is designed to do this one thing and do it well. It is the only medicine now before the public for woman's peculiar ailments, adapted to her delicate organization by a regularly graduated physician, an experienced and skilled specialist in these maladies. It cannot do harm in any condition of the system. Its sales exceed the combined sales of all other medicines for women.

From a Financial Point of View.

"I beg your pardon," said the man with the slightly bald head who sat in a parquet seat near one of the boxes in a down town theater the other evening. "I beg your pardon," he repeated, "but would you mind looking at the figures on this check and telling me what they are? I'm a little nearsighted."

The youngest member of the noisy box party, an amiable looking youth with highly plastered hair, suspended his conversation with the interesting blond in the green dress a moment, leaned over the front of the box, and in answer to the questioner, who had risen to his feet and was smilingly holding out for his inspection the check end of a ticket, he said:

"Certainly, sir. The figures are $1.50."

"Well," rejoined the questioner, "that's exactly what I paid to hear this play tonight, and I'm going to get the worth of my money, or I'll lift my voice right now and raise a fuss and make a scene. You'll oblige me by telling the rest of them."

If Napoleon Had Invaded England?

It is also pertinent to inquire what would have happened had Napoleon been successful in landing an army on English shores. In the first place, his mastery of the seas would have been quickly ended by the combined efforts of the English war vessels then afloat, and he would have been left without base of supplies or communication. In the second place he would have met a resistance from a proud, free, enlightened and desperate people which would have paralyzed all his tactics and would have worn out any army he could have kept together. Did Napoleon fail to understand this? Of course not. He had [illegible] that an army which cannot be [illegible] is a doomed army. He [illegible] this theory verified in Egypt, and he knew very well that a permanent mastery of the seas was out of the question with the fleets and flotillas at his disposal. It would appear in [illegible] of any other man than Napoleon that the proof was complete, in [illegible] what he actually did do—namely, the attack [illegible] on Austria. The [illegible] which Metternich received in 1810 that this had been the emperor's intention from the first, and the lavishness with which Napoleon, throughout his public career, made use of any and every form of ruse, even the costliest, in order to mislead his foes, are complementary pieces of evidence which furnish the strongest corroboration.—Professor W. M. Sloane's "Life of Napoleon" in Century.

There will soon be no place on earth where pugilists may fight—with their fists.

After all, if there are Marion people who must drink beer, there is no reason why it should not be home brewed.

Those who wondered how Salisbury could ever crawfish are now wondering how he did it without attracting more attention.

The murderers of poor Pearl Bryan are no doubt lucky to be captured and held in Cincinnati. It might not be healthy for them over the river.

One thing yet to be feared in the case of the heartless murderers of poor Pearl Bryan is that some fool females will insist upon carrying them bouquets.

A Fostoria man has an argument in favor of changing the national emblem from the eagle to a hog. This probably is a result of living so close to Guy Major's town.

The information comes from Turkey that the Armenians are becoming restless. Unless relief reaches them soon their only danger of "becoming restless" will proceed from grave robbers

Amid the general rejoicing over the success of the national bond sale there is a cloud of suspicion that J. Pierpont Morgan got in a little sharp practice by which he was able to overbid by a small fraction of 1 per cent. the bid of the Stewart combination. The belief is that Mr. Morgan had the advantage of a tip and there are grounds for suspicion.

By the death of William H. English, which occurred Friday afternoon, Indiana loses one of the state's distinguished characters. Mr. English was a man of robust honesty, of peculiar make-up, so successful financially that he is believed to have been the wealthiest man in the Hoosier state. He spent eight years in congress from 1852 to 1860. Horace Greely referred to him as a "most unflinching Democrat," but his partisanism always gave way to his staunch patriotism, a fact that was particularly notable during the country's stormy war period. Outside his own state he was probably best known from his second place on the presidential ticket with General Hancock. He was in his 74th year.

REANIMATION NEEDED.

Recent evidences that the Marion board of health is yet among the quick leads to the hope that there is a remote possibility that that institution may be resuscitated, revivified and transformed into an organization of usefulness. As it now exists and as it has existed for an indefinite number of years, the local board of health has been a "delusion and a snare." The only exceptions to an existence of utter uselessness have been spasmodic efforts towards the performance of its duty. These instances are comparatively rare, however.

Individual members of the present board admit freely the organization's incapacity for accomplishing results. A variety of reasons are assigned. Here is a member who is a drawback to united action, another is mentioned as a violator of the board's own rules, while there is never neglect to refer to the discouragement received at the hands of the city council when it is determined to take action that will entail expense to the city. There is certainly a remedy for this. There is no lack of authority for the board's action in any effort pertaining to the health of the community. The statutes are liberal on the subject. When members applied to council last spring for assurance that bills created in the discharge of duties looking to the health of the city would be paid information was received that it was too late, that the tax levy had been made and the sanitary fund would not be ample to meet obligations other than those of which the council had knowledge at the time the levy was made. The result was that after the usual brief, spring spasm of cleanliness, the health board was attacked by that tired feeling and lapsed into its accustomed listlessness.

The fact is that during at least eleven months of the year it would be hard to find any evidence that Marion had such a thing as a board of health. Contagions exist, the health officer performs the duty of placarding the house occupied by the afflicted patient and all official precaution ends there. Persons exposed to disease come and go at pleasure and no note is taken of the carelessness, that is often criminal. This shameful laxity in the enforcement of precautionary measures to prevent the spread of disease is attributable to members of the board, the presumed guardians of the health of the city. In no other city of the size and importance of Marion would such carelessness and disregard of all sanitary laws be tolerated for a day. There are even villages in Marion county that the local board of health might emulate, to the safety of the city and its inhabitants.

The present board of health should awake, or resign.

Mr. Hensley's bill to amend the statutes relative to assessing corner lots for street improvements is attracting attention in the larger cities, which have had much controversy over the law as it now stands. Cincinnati and Toledo already have special act for their benefit giving them practically what the Hensley bill provides for the whole state. The measure is very likely to meet with opposition of corner lot owners, which of course is quite natural. Such opposition, however, should be met by those who may be, unfortunately, not owners of valuable corner lots, as it is quite as much to their interest to avoid the burdens that would fall upon them under the interpretation of the law as it now stands.

Senator Tillman boasts that he has risen from the ranks. The "ranks" certainly have a case against the South Carolina senator if they want to push it.

Indiana is now good fighting territory for presidential candidates, and the friends of each have their claiming machines working overtime.

A young man from this city, who is traveling on the road, was calling on a number of friends in Bellefontaine one evening this week, and during the evening a member of the household rushed in as pale as might have been expected had the local option law of that city been repealed. When the rest of the company had been driven wild with frenzy, and were afraid that a speak easy had been finally pulled, some one managed to gasp, "What's the matter, has there been a murder committed?" "No," replied the excited Logan county warrior, "just come out in the yard and see the electric lights turned on." Bellefontaine has just put in electric lights, and they were turned on for the first time this week.

Frank Kelleher, the notary public at the office of Scofield, Durfee & Scofield, and Sick Clary, the sturdy smith, have been friends since boyhood. In their early days, they gave a grand exhibition of all the wonders of the hippodrome, and the many feats of the circus. Among their several acts was one that they had contemplated making a wonderful hit with. Timothy Fahey owned two large dogs, and the boys tied the dogs together, that is, one in front of the other, and started them across a board from mow to mow in the upper part of the barn, where the circus was to be given. Their idea was all right, it was to have the one dog lead the other one across. Rehearsals were being given, Rod Diegle had learned his song, the clowns had all practiced jokes that were funny, and then came the dogs. The dogs got along all right until they reached the middle of the board, when one lost his footing and slipped off. The other one followed, but got off on the other side of the board, and the animals were left suspended in the air, and came to a sad end by strangulation. The program was declared off.

TOWN TOPICS.

It was a mighty mean man who started the report on the street car motormen to the effect that they had deputized one of their number to throw a monkey wrench into the engine at the power house in order to lay off and do full justice to the free beer which was put on tap today.

The social events for the coming week thus far announced are limited. Monday night Mrs. Jarley's wax works will be presented by St. Agnes guild of St. Paul's Episcopal church. Tuesday evening Miss Bernice Christian will entertain the Cinch club. Thursday evening is set for the Episcopal birthday party at the Norris home. Friday afternoon Mrs. M. A. Turney entertains the Twigs, their husbands and gentlemen friends, and Saturday afternoon the Musical-Literary club meets.

The Episcopal church people are making great preparations for their birthday party which will occur February 14, St. Valentine's day, at the Gospel Hill home of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Norris. It is intended that each guest shall contribute as many pennies as he or she may be years old. Of course there will not be a few who will chip in a dollar in preference to giving away their age and thus it is expected that a goodly amount will be realized. Refreshments will be served and a fine vocal and instrumental program will be rendered, one of the features of which will be the singing of Miss Hessong.

J. C. Johnston, as administrator of the estate of Eliza P. G. Beerbower, deceased, has gotten out a bill advertising the public sale of the personal effects of decedent which reads after a style peculiar to himself. As an advertisement the bill should be a huge success inviting the people of Marion, as it does, to the sale of the effects of the decedent, "consisting of bed, bedding, stove, cupboard, bowls and pictures, glass and crockeryware and many other articles too numerous to mention, consisting of 'traps and calamities,' the accumulation of more than forty years. Come early and stay late."

The ladies of the W. R. C. are daily receiving applications for assistance. Work on the streets was carried on so late in the season, last year, that many have been able, until a recent date, to support themselves, but at the present time the demand for assistance is very great and fully as heavy as it was at any time last winter. The ladies are seeking gifts of old clothes for men, women or children as there is a steady demand for assistance in this line and the corps is out of clothes. Anyone having any clothes which they can spare would confer a favor on the ladies and do an act of mercy by leaving them at the T. H. B. Beale home on Center street, or at the residence of any ward vice president.

An endeavor is being made to make the Royal Arcanum meeting to be held here April 22 a memorable one in many ways, and with that idea in view those in charge of it have suggested that the casts which produced "The Bicyclers," and the cast which has been selected to give "A Box of Monkeys" before the Mask and Wig club give both these plays on the evening of the day mentioned for the amusement of the visiting brethren. "The Bicyclers" as a play has been voted a huge success but as for the worth of "A Box of Monkeys" as it will be presented by the present cast, there may be some doubt. Wouldn't it be wise to try the thing, first, on the the club and then if the club survives, spring it on the unoffensive visitors.

A pathetic story comes to the perpetrator of Town Topics, which involves a traveling man known in Marion. Last week he was in a room at a hotel not a thousand miles from Marion, washing and meanwhile talking to a friend. Since the beginning of the present year he had been living with a woman who traveled with him while his wife was at home sick. While the two men were conversing a telegraph messenger rapped at the door and delivered a message directed to the commercial traveler, whose hands being soapy, asked his friend to open it. The friend opened and read the message which said, "your wife died last night at twelve o'clock." since learning which the husband has been almost crazed, being brought to see the error of his ways, has quit this territory and is traveling in the south weighted down with an everlasting remorse.

Nervous

People often wonder why their nerves are so weak; why they get tired so easily; why they start at every slight but sudden sound; why they do not sleep naturally; why they have frequent headaches, indigestion and

Palpitation of the Heart.

The explanation is simple. It is found in that impure blood which is continually feeding the nerves upon refuse instead of the elements of strength and vigor. In such condition opiate and nerve compounds simply deaden and do not cure. Philip Bauer is suffering from a very severe injury to one of his eyes, which came near causing him to lose the sight of the same, and may yet be the means of creating a great deal of trouble for him. At present, however, it is not believed that the sight of the eye will be affected.

Friday Mr. Bauer was at work in the woods and while doing some chopping a portion of a branch of a tree struck in one of the eyes. It caused him intense pain at the time, but he extracted the splinter from the optic and came to this city. Subject—"Jesus revealing the true way and the false."—Luke 6: 41-49.

The bible and "Science and Health," by the Rev. Mary Baker Eddy, discoverer and founder of "Christian Science," are used in these studies.

Golden Text: "Why call ye me Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say." Luke 6: 46.

If we would enter into the true way we will commence at home to cast out the beam, and that is in human consciousness. Jesus revealed but one way whereby man can be saved and there is no other way under heaven, and we shall know when we are in the right way, for He said, Signs shall follow them that believe—understand.

All welcome. Bring your bible.

Resurrecting a Grievance.

There is now more or less talk in regard to those north State street grades. Some time since a grade was given and the street railway company put down its tracks. Then came paving and the street railway company tracks had to be lowered.

Now comes many of the property holders and wish to have the walks on the east side of the street lowered. This some are willing to do, but others ask that it be done at the city's expense. What action council will take is not known, but it is understood that they will not allow it to be done if the city is obliged to pay for the same.

A New Life of Grant.

For upwards of two years the publishers of McClure's Magazine have been quietly gathering material and pictures for a new life of General Grant. They believe that they have made a larger collection of portraits of Grant (many of them rare) and other pictures relating to his life, than has ever been made before. This biography will bring out the real Grant in the same vivid, thorough, and interesting manner as Lincoln is presented in the "Life" now running in McClure's. They have been fortunate in securing the co-operation of Col. F. D. Grant, who has most of his father's papers.

AGAINST THE VESTIBULE.

Small Creditors Get Judgment Against the Place.

'Squire McKinley was attending to business in quick order this afternoon, and rendered judgment in four cases in that many minutes. They were the cases against Harry Kear, which were brought in attachments on the Vestibule to secure money due.

The first on the docket was that of C. Turner & Company, amounting to $37.31

The Kuebler Brewing company was next. This is the largest bill brought before 'Squire McKinley and amounts to $200.75.

J. W. Wren secured a judgment of $10. on an attachment suit that he had brought before the mayor.

The Marion Ice and Cold Storage company has the smallest bill but secured a judgment in the amount asked. It was $7.13. A number of small bills have not been presented nor never will be. Kear had borrowed a few dollars when on debauches, but most of these bills had been made good.

The Vestibule is now in the hands of the Portsmouth people and will be until the court of common pleas decides just what the mortgage covers. These people also have a case of attachment pending in the court of 'Squire Osbun for over $200.

'Squire McKinley rendered judgment in all of the cases by default and the matter will cause some lively legislation.

The Stanton Balment company want to sell the saloon, but will not lease it or sell it again and retain the mortgage. It has already been an elephant on their hands and they have grown tired of it.

NOTHING BUT TALK

CONCERNING STREET IMPROVEMENTS FOR NEXT SPRING.

Some Property Owners Would Like To Have Their Streets Paved, but Others Oppose—Things Not in Shape to Encourage Improvements.

There is much talk concerning paving, and there are remote probabilities of other streets than those now paved, being improved in the near future.

Engineer Bowen was seen this afternoon and stated that there was no definite action being taken that he was aware of in regard to additional streets being paved. He had heard some talk in regard to paving other streets, but he did not know whether it would result in more than talk or not. It is safe to say, however, that for a long while yet some of the streets that are now being talked of for paving, will not be improved in that way.

There is talk of paving Greenwood street from George to Church street, that is from the Huber works to the street mentioned. This has been the talk for some time, but as yet there is nothing being done definitely in regard to a petition or bringing the matter to official attention.

Then there is talk and has been for some time of paving north Main street. Many are of the opinion that if such a thing is done a sewer should be placed in before the paving is put down.

Mt. Vernon avenue is also talked of for paving improvements, but so far it has only amounted to a discussion by a few of those who are desirous of seeing the street paved.

Again there are some who would like to see Cherry street paved. These are the only ones talked about. It is likely, however, to be some time yet before Cherry street is paved unless the residents and property holders ask for it by an almost unanimous petition.

LIKE JACK SHEPPARD.

The Unique Jail Jumping Record of John Mahony.

WAS A TERROR IN HIS YOUTH.

Learned Lessons of Crime In the House of Refuge and Devoted His Life to Getting Into Jail and Out Again—Many Daring Escapes.

One of the most remarkable careers in the criminal history of this country is that of John Mahony, alias Mahoney, who because of his numerous escapes from prisons and penitentiaries gained for himself the sobriquet of the American Jack Sheppard. Mahony became known to the police officials of nearly every big city in the country, but was especially active in New York, Boston and Philadelphia. He has been a prisoner in the penitentiaries of half a dozen states, however, and has made his escape from more tight places probably than any other American criminal.

While serving a five year term in Charlestown, Mass., Mahony wrote a long and interesting account of his career and told in detail the causes which led him into evil ways. This article was written in 1870, when Mahony was but 26 years old, but he had already had a long experience in crime. It shows that he could handle a pen with almost as much facility as he could a jimmy.

It seems that Mahony was born bad. As a schoolboy he was a habitual truant and a terror to his teachers. The son of the teacher of a French boarding school on Long Island gave him his first lessons in iniquity and taught him to chew tobacco.

He was an apt pupil in wickedness and soon became too bad for the boarding school. His mother, who was a widow and lived in New York, sent him to the house of refuge in that city. Instead of reforming him, this institution proved to be for him, as it was for many other bad boys, a sort of preparatory school for criminals. Mahony met there boys who were older and more wicked than himself and he acquired much knowledge of a criminal nature.

His mother transferred him to a private institution of a better character, but the managers there could not keep him shut up. He filed the iron shackles which they put on his ankles and escaped with a regularity that was discouraging.

Mahony was sent back to the house of refuge, where he says he was treated with great cruelty. Taking the first chance that offered, he left the refuge and wandered to Five Points, New York, where he met some graduates of the refuge, and, under their tutorship, commenced to steal for a living. His mother periodically persuaded him to abandon his evil ways and return home, but he would regularly fall from grace and go back to stealing.

He finally fell in with a notorious thief known as Italian Dave, who gave him practical instruction in the gentle arts of burglary, sneak thieving and highway robbery. He assisted in the robbery of stores and residences and took a hand in waylaying men at night on the streets. He was at last arrested and held as witness against Italian Dave, but managed to escape from the house of detention as often as he was rearrested.

After robbing a jewelry store in New Jersey he was caught and put in the famous old Tombs prison. This had always been considered a safe prison, but Mahony, though only a boy, did not have much trouble in getting out of it. He picked the lock of his cell door and crawled through the bars of a window opening on the street.

After this exploit he remained in hiding at the home of a relative on Long Island for a few months, but committed a burglary in the neighborhood and barely avoided arrest. He went next to Jersey City, where he was promptly arrested, and as promptly escaped from jail. For the next two years he confined his attentions to New York and robbed with great success, until he was finally arrested and sent to Sing Sing. Here at last he found walls that were strong enough to hold him, and consequently he staid there for two years.

Upon being released Mahony returned to New York and was arrested for robbery. This time he got off with a six months' sentence to the penitentiary on Blackwell's Island, but he again proved too slippery to hold, and escaped.

He then took a short trip to New Orleans, but drifted back to the metropolis and was caught while stealing. He managed to evade arrest, however, but was forced to enlist in the army. He was sent south, but deserted and after a number of thrilling escapes and recaptures got back to New York.

After leading a life of crime and dissipation for several years without being apprehended he was again caught and sentenced to a long term in Sing Sing. Knowing that once behind the bars there he would [illegible]

This was a bold and daring system of robbery, but Mahony was [illegible] Mahony [illegible] He had [illegible] he was [illegible] inhabitants of Sing Sing village were after him, but he lashed his horse into a run and escaped without a scratch. That night he hid in a barn and stole another team, with which he continued on his way to New York. He was again recaptured [illegible] for the whole locality had been aroused, but he got away and finally reached Boston. Soon after this he went to Philadelphia, where he was arrested, but escaped from the officers by jumping from a second story window.

Mahony's next escape was from Charlestown prison, where he had been sent for a job done in Boston. Having obtained a suit of old clothes, he asked permission to go to the hospital to see a doctor. Instead of doing this he put on his old clothes, took a couple of cans of paint from the [illegible] room and started to walk out the gate. The way in which he deceived the guard at the gate who stopped him shows his quickness of wit.

"How did you get in here?" said the guard.

"Why, didn't you see me come in on a wagon with three other men this morning?" replied Mahony.

"Was it before or after breakfast?" asked the guard, still suspicious.

Mahony, who remembered that the guard could not have been on duty before breakfast, replied promptly: "Before breakfast, of course."

"Oh," said the guard, "I was not on duty then, and that is the reason I did not see you. You can pass."

For a few brief moments Mahony enjoyed the luxury of liberty, but he was seen by an officer who knew him. The alarm was at once given, and the convict was back inside the walls within ten minutes, wearing a ball and chain weighing 25 pounds. After making a second attempt, which was not so nearly successful as the first, Mahony gave it up and served out his sentence.

At the time of writing the sketch of his life above referred to Mahony professed an intention to reform, but he was no sooner at liberty than he began his old career of crime. It seems that he went to Philadelphia and cleaned out a store, with the assistance of a pal. The plunder, which was worth about $7,000, was shipped to New York, but it was traced and Mahony was arrested as he claimed it at the express office. He was taken to police headquarters and locked up. When the Philadelphia officer arrived and asked for his prisoner, there was a big sensation in Mulberry street.

The elusive Mahony was not to be found.

A general alarm was sent out and along [illegible] but there was no trace of the prisoner. The boldness of his escape was a big surprise to the police officials. The cell in which he had been confined opened directly on a public passageway. Mahony had forced the bars of the window over the door, squeezed his body through and walked out to liberty in broad daylight and under the very noses of his captors. He had to walk through a corridor in which people were constantly passing and within ten feet of the door of the detective's office, where there were a dozen or more men who knew him.

This was not by any means his last escapade, but it was one of his most notorious ones. He went west after this and continued his operations under various aliases. He served a long term in the Illinois state prison at Joliet and other terms in the Eastern penitentiary in Pennsylvania. At last accounts he was still behind prison bars, but was probably planning another escape.

A WEDDING SPECIALIST

Pastor Schneider Has United 15,736 Couples.

ALSO POPULAR AT CHRISTENINGS.

He Never Preaches Except at Funerals. Romances Every Day. Night Calls Are Common. Pathetic Story of a Deathbed Marriage.

To have a romance grafted on every day of life is the lot of few men. Rev. Francis J. Schneider of New York enjoys this distinction. He is attached to no church now, but is called "the pastor of the east side." Men, women and children all know him. He has joined in the holy bonds of matrimony 15,736 couples in the 27 years of his activity in the city.

Day and night, morning, noon and evening Pastor Schneider is always available as a binder of [illegible] wedding. That there may be no [illegible] for late comers who desire his services there is a night bell at the pastor's residence and a speaking tube through which should the extraordinary emergency arise [illegible] where time was precious [illegible] that every minute's delay [illegible] the pastor could perform the ceremony. Few physicians in good practice have more night calls than [illegible] Schneider.

His matrimonial record is the doctor's pride. He recently computed his figures for the [illegible] and found that between Jan. 1, 18[illegible], and Jan. 1, 1896, he performed the wedding ceremony 15,736 times. The doctor came to this country from Germany in 1868, and besides the innumerable marriages which he has performed he has officiated at [illegible] christenings, and funerals almost without number. Altogether he is the busiest dominie in this city.

"I like to marry people," said the pastor. "I think it is the highest function of the minister. Interesting stories? Oh, many, many of them. But I try to forget them. It is not the minister's business to remember all the secrets that come to him."

Just then the bell rang. "Almost every time that that bell rings it means a new union of hearts, a fresh binding of souls." The alarm in this case was not misleading. And there was a romance.

A substantial looking German was ushered in by the [illegible]

"I wish to see Dr. Schneider," said the newcomer.

"I am Dr. Schneider."

"I want you to go with me to Greenpoint to perform a marriage ceremony. Time presses."

"Why?"

"Because the man is on his deathbed. It is my sister," he said, "who is to be married. Eleven years ago she ran away with a married man. He lived with her regularly for a time, but after awhile he returned to his wife. However, he continued to support her, and I saw her at frequent intervals. My sister had three children, [illegible] the eldest being 9 years old. Three weeks ago the [illegible] and my sister [illegible] We had cast her off [illegible] I went to this man after his wife died and asked him to make of my sister an honest woman. He sneered at me and I [illegible] But nothing we could do would change him.

smile lit up his features. "Ah, Barbara, come!" he murmured. The little woman was down on her knees beside the bed in an instant, her head resting close to the man, her hand convulsively grasping the emaciated one that lay on the counterpane, all white, weak and helpless. Her sobs shook her body.

"Come, we must hurry. I have little time, I feel it." And again the smile came over the sick man's features. The pastor prepared for the ceremony, but he was interrupted by the sick man, who said suddenly and almost with startling emphasis: "No, the children. Let the children be brought first. They shall be present."

The brother passed out of the room and in a few moments returned with three children, two boys of perhaps 6 and 9 and a little girl of 3 or 4. They stared in open eyed wonder and amazement for a few moments. Then they caught sight of their mother weeping as if her heart would break, and in a moment they had flung themselves upon her, crying out bitterly.

The sick man watched them in silence for a few moments, then his eyes too became suffused with tears, the lids sank slowly, and to all appearances the breath went out of his body.

"Oh, Franz, Franz!" wailed the poor woman.

But Franz this time could not respond. It was several minutes before the physician could bring back the spark of life. Slowly the man's eyes unclosed again.

"Now you must keep quiet, absolutely quiet, and hurry," cautioned the physician. He took up the sick man's hand and laid it over the hand of the woman on the counterpane.

"Do you promise to take this woman for your wife?" The pastor's tones came only a little above a whisper.

Faintly came the response, "I do."

"Do you take this man to be your husband?"

"Yes, oh, yes!" It was spoken in a convulsive, sobbing tone by Barbara.

"Then I pronounce you man and wife. What God hath joined let no man put asunder."

As the words were spoken Franz looked around once; then, his eyes resting on the woman whom at last he had righted, he passed away quietly, painlessly. Death was a guest at the marriage.

St. Cere is not St. Cere at all, but Armand Rosenthal, a rascally German Jew, whose unsavory record is now being unearthed in Paris. His debut in journalism began in Leipsic as collaborator in a magazine edited by the celebrated Sacher Masoch. CURES BY SPIRIT AID.

How Hammond Differs From Schlatter and Other Healers.

TREATS PATIENTS IN A TRANCE.

Does Not Claim to Be a Messiah and Says He Receives Power From the Spirit of a German Doctor—Is Poor, but Refuses Fees.

Boone county, Ills., has a rival to Schlatter, the divine healer. His name is W. E. Hammond, and he lives on a farm four miles from Belvidere. This year he is cultivating the [illegible] of humanity and not working the farm. He claims to heal by spiritualistic aid and [illegible] fees for his services. He differs radically from other spiritualistic healers. He is called "Dr." by his friends and patients, though he modestly disclaims the title. Twenty-three years old, he already has a wife and child, and how to support them without posing as a sordid money maker is a subject that is just now receiving his prayerful consideration.

Stories of miraculous cures have been circulated through Boone and DeKalb counties, with the result that the "doctor" is overwhelmed with requests for aid, and there are stories of people, hitherto noted for probity and truthfulness, who stand ready to swear that the cures are bona fide, and that they are the living witnesses of the efficiency of the healer's power. There is no doubt that some of them a few months or weeks ago were either bedridden, or, as regular physicians declared, on the point of death. Many of them had been pronounced incurable. They are walking the streets today, attending to business, and they place the credit for their happily changed condition upon Hammond's shoulders. The latter takes his honors with becoming humility, simply saying he is the instrument of one greater than he. His "control," he says, is a certain German doctor in the spiritual world who refuses to give his full name, but calls himself "Dr. John."

Hammond does not claim to be a Messiah and does not pursue the methods used by Schlatter, who in Denver merely touched his patients for a moment and asked them to pass on. He uses the "passes" of the hypnotist and goes into a trance like all trance mediums. While at work he goes over and handles the patient much as does a regular physician making a diagnosis. Much time is consumed, and if he attends to 25 patients in a day he is doing well.

Hammond treated an old man who is a victim of dyspepsia in the presence of a Chicago Tribune reporter, who thus describes the operation: "The healer spent a few minutes in going into a trance and putting himself in communication with 'Dr. John' of the other world. Gradually his eyes closed, and soon he arose and seized his patient's hand. Throughout the proceeding, though his eyes appeared to be tightly shut, he moved about with perfect freedom and precision of movement. He began to speak in broken English. He told the man his stomach was the seat of his troubles, and that he would be well in three months if he obeyed a few simple physical hygienic laws.

"Fifteen minutes were spent on the patient, during which time the little healer had wrestled with the tall subject in an unexpectedly active and forcible manner. He rubbed him vigorously, passed his hands over him, and snapped his fingers as the hypnotist does, sunk his fist in the small of his back, massaged his stomach and bent his shoulders back until they creaked. It was really hard work, but he showed no signs of tiring. When it was over, somebody brought him a basin of water, in which he dipped his hands, and in two minutes he opened his eyes and arose, smiling to greet those who surrounded him."

Then he told his story.

"I am 23 years old," he said, "and have been in this work only a few months. A peculiar power has been given me and I want to exercise it. Others can do the same thing, and I am willing to talk freely and be advertised so that those to whom this power has been vouchsafed may discern it and bring it forth. I take no money because I do not think it right [illegible] a holier cause than that of making money, and besides my control forbids it. When I leave here I shall take from all these people just the amount of my railroad fare home. My needs have been provided."

"But how will you live?"

"I am praying for guidance. I have a family, and how to provide for it is a trial to me at this time. I cannot work the farm and do this work at the same time, so I have already rented the place.

"My parents are American [illegible] and I was born near Belvidere. [illegible] My grandfather was a Methodist [illegible] Early in life I [illegible] of the religion I was taught [illegible] not soul satisfying [illegible] I studied, but [illegible] became impressed with [illegible] and I prayed for power [illegible] the power [illegible] could [illegible] tongues.

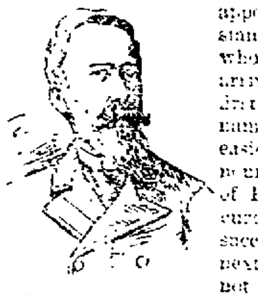
THE RUSSIAN EMBASSADOR.

M. Kotzebue Comes to Washington After Long Diplomatic Experience.



M. DE KOTZEBUE.

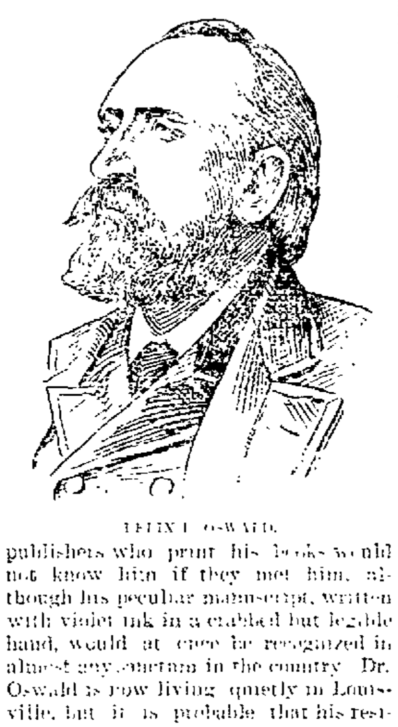
Washington society is said to be much pleased with M. de Kotzebue, the newly appointed Russian embassador, who has recently arrived. In the first place his name is much easier to pronounce than that of Prince Cantacuzene, whom he succeeds. In the next place, he is not only a polished diplomat, but an accomplished society man, with a beautiful wife and an interesting family. Mme. de Kotzebue did not accompany her husband, as she is still in Russia, but she will probably arrive before the winter is over, and then it is expected that the Russian embassy will be a more lively place than it was under the regime of the prince, who, while being a refined and able diplomat, did not care much for social gayeties.

Ernest Charles de Kotzebue is about 57 years old and comes from a prominent and powerful Russian family. He is a very wealthy man and has vast estates in the Baltic provinces. His grandfather was a famous Russian naval officer and was one of the first foreigners to enter Japan. M. de Kotzebue himself has had some naval experience, having served for three years as a midshipman, but his wife persuaded him to enter the diplomatic service. He became an under secretary in one of the foreign legations and has held some important posts. He is a privy councilor and chamberlain, and his last mission was as Russian minister to the court of Wurttemberg. It is understood that he exchanges places with Prince Cantacuzene, who is his cousin, at the latter's request. The new embassador speaks English with no perceptible accent. His daughter, who is the wife of Count de Rehander, is a tall, beautiful blond, and his son is an officer in the Russian army who has just married a very pretty Russian girl. His son accompanies him as secretary.

HERMIT, SCIENTIST, PHILOSOPHER.

Dr. Oswald Has a Roving Commission From Nature to Find Out Queer Things.

Many readers of scientific and popular magazines are familiar with the writings of Felix L. Oswald, but few persons know who he is or where and how he lives. Even the editors with whom he has business dealings or the publishers who print his books would not know him if they met him, although his peculiar manuscript, written with violet ink in a crabbed but legible hand, would at once be recognized in almost any sanctum in the country. Dr. Oswald is now living quietly in Louisville, but it is probable that his residence there is only a temporary one, as he spends most of his time far away from the haunts of men. Besides being a writer he is a hermit, scientist and philosopher.



FELIX L. OSWALD.

Dr. Oswald was born in Belgium about 50 years ago, but he was graduated from a Russian college, and for many years has been roving about the earth, always with his eyes wide open and pursuing some sort of scientific study or investigation. He was educated as a physician, but turned his attention to natural philosophy, and it was this science that led him to become a wanderer. He is a most prolific and versatile writer and finds a ready sale for his articles. He has visited all sorts of out of the way places and wrote a series of most entertaining articles entitled "Summerland Sketches; or, Rambles In the Backwoods of Mexico and Central America." Many of his writings deal with the laws of health, and he is regarded as something of an authority on this subject. His stories of animal life are always very interesting, for he writes from personal observation. To him have been revealed many of the secrets of nature, and whether he is writing about the habits of snakes or presenting a new theory concerning climatic changes he is always entertaining. One of his best known books is "Physical Education; or, The Health Laws of Nature."

A few years ago Dr. Oswald was living on the [illegible] in Tennessee. For ten [illegible] he tramped over the smoky mountains [illegible] selecting various peaks as a [illegible] camping place, which he called his home [illegible] He generally lives [illegible] his meals over an open fire, Indian style, and sleeping on a bed of boughs.

TWO ON ICE.

Tales Told by Washington Munchausens During an Idle Hour.

The group around the fire were talking about skating. "I don't pretend to be much of a skater," said the man with his feet on the mantelpiece. "The last time I indulged in the pastime, though, I had the good luck to slip into an airhole."

"You don't call that good luck, do you?" asked the man who had been trying to break into the conversation and tell a story himself.

"Well, under ordinary circumstances I wouldn't call it good luck," replied the man with his feet on the mantel, "but in this instance it led to my catching the largest fish ever found in this section of the country. It happened this way. I was skating around the airhole, and at last ran plumb into it. The lower part of my body went under the ice, but I was able to hold myself up by the arms. At last a man came to help me out, but one of my skates seemed to have become entangled in something below the surface, and he had to call for assistance. Several persons responded, and by their united efforts pulled me and a four pound rock bass through the airhole. The jaws of the fish were held apart by one of my skate blades. I suppose," he added by way of explanation, "that I must have stuck my foot in his mouth when I first went down."

It was the unuttered consensus of opinion that the raconteur was a liar.

There was a short pause, and the man who had been waiting for a chance told of an adventure on Lake Superior. He said that while skating there one evening, far from shore, he was pursued by a monstrous gray wolf. "The wolf chased me about considerably," he said, "but I wasn't afraid, because I always was a good skater and could beat any wolf that was ever created when it came to getting around on the ice. After I had a little fun with the animal, making 'figure eights' and things like that around him, I thought I would put him to some use. So I made a sudden dash around to his rear and caught hold of his tail with one hand. I had a shinney stick in the other and beat him across the back with it. Well, gentlemen, that beast was so shocked and surprised that he didn't know what to do. He jumped around just like a colt that was being broken in. I held on tight, though, and he finally came to the conclusion that he wanted to go home and lit out for shore.

"Gentlemen, I know you will believe me when I say that that was the supreme moment of my life. There I was holding to that wolf's tail with one hand, beating him with the shinney stick which I held in the other and flying over the glassy surface at the rate of about [illegible] miles an hour. As we neared the shore he [illegible] up some, and on reaching the land he lay down and died from exhaustion.

"I have his hide at home now," continued the narrator, "and you can see it if you want to."

This seemed satisfactory proof of the truth of the tale. At last no one questioned it, and the meeting adjourned.—Washington Star.

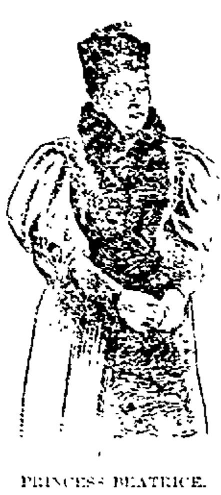
THE WIDOW BEATRICE.

Interesting Incidents In the History of Queen Victoria's Favorite Daughter.

By the death of Prince Henry of Battenberg another widow has been added to the rather mournful company of bereaved ladies at Windsor. The queen, two of her daughters and a daughter-in-law are now husbandless, and under the rule of the present court none of them may marry because the queen has not done so. Princess Beatrice, who has been left a widow at the age of 39, with four children, is the youngest of Victoria's daughters and has always been the favorite. Ever since the death of the prince consort she has been the constant companion of the British sovereign and has had a greater influence with her mother than all the other royal children. Even the marriage of the princess did not interrupt this intimacy, for before Victoria would consent to the union she gave her son-in-law to understand that he was not to make himself too obtrusive as a husband.



PRINCESS BEATRICE.

Princess Beatrice has always been known as the most accomplished musician in the royal family. When quite young, she developed a talent for reading music at sight, and this was carefully cultivated. The marriage of the princess and the late prince occurred in 1885. It was said to have been a genuine love match. Whether this was true in the prince's case is doubtful. He was a man with a past, which was always kept well in the background. The princess is said to have loved before too. In 1877 she was reported to have become infatuated with a young man who was then employed as her instructor, and who has since attained some distinction as a preacher. It was at one time thought to be a settled fact that her marriage to the prince imperial of France, who was afterward killed in Zululand, had been settled upon by the mothers of the young people. Among other eligible young men who have been considered as suitors for her hand have been Prince Oscar of Sweden; Amadeo, late king of Spain, and Louis of Battenberg, an elder brother of Prince Henry.

For a long time after her marriage the princess had considerable trouble in keeping peace between her husband and her royal mother. He at first objected to dancing attendance upon his gouty and short tempered mother-in-law, but at last submitted with such good grace that he established himself in her favor.

WELLINGTON'S PROMOTION.

Advanced From the House to the Senate by the Maryland Legislature.

When the term of Senator Gibson expires, in March, 1897, Representative George L. Wellington, who is now serving his first term in the house, will step over into the other wing of the capitol and become a senator. The recently elected senator from Maryland is a comparatively young man and has risen from the ranks. He is of German parentage and was born in Cumberland, Md., in 1852. At the age of 12 years he started out in the world to make his own living, and his first occupation was that of clerking in a country store. At the age of 18 he became a clerk in a bank at Cumberland and afterward was promoted to teller.

He has been connected with politics ever since he was old enough to vote. He stuck to the Republican party when it was in a hopeless minority. He was sent as delegate to the national conventions in 1884 and 1888. In 1889 he was a candidate for state comptroller, but was defeated. He was later appointed subtreasurer at Baltimore by President Harrison. In 1892 he was a candidate for congress, but was unsuccessful. Two years later, however, he was again in the race and this time was elected by a plurality of 3,000. Mr. Wellington was a main factor in securing the nomination of Governor Lowndes, and as chairman of the Republican state committee he managed the last campaign with such skill and political foresight that his friends claim for him a large share of the honor of the victory which his party achieved. His term as representative does not expire until Senator Gibson's term does, so he will be able to serve his full time in the house before going into the senate. Senator Elect Wellington is an ambitious and energetic man and is expected to become something of a figure in national affairs.

States That Pareira Brava, One of the Ingredients of Dr. Hobbs' Kidney Pills,

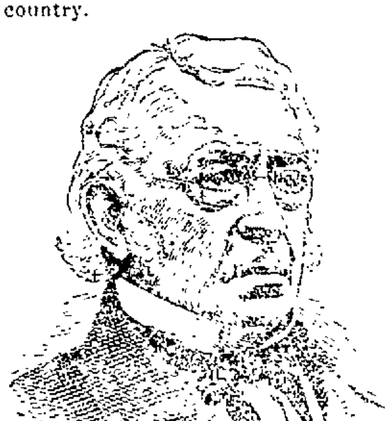
Is the Most Wonderful Remedy for Kidney, Bladder and Womb Troubles in the World.

All Columbus Joins Him.

"If I was limited to but one remedy in all the world for kidney and urinary disorders, I would unhesitatingly select Pareira Brava. It is the best and most satisfactory all-round remedy I have ever seen and is the only one with which I have been able, thus far, to give unfailing relief in Bright's Disease."

Pareira Brava is one of the ingredients of Dr. Hobbs' Sparagus Kidney Pills that have just been publicly tested by the newspapers and public of Columbus. The other ingredients are Asparagus Root and Berries, Buchu Leaves, Juniper Berries, Uva Ursi and Corn Silk.

Is it any wonder that, with such an array of kidney specifics, gathered in their purest and freshest form regardless of expense, and cunningly and scientifically concentrated, refined and combined as they are in this great remedy, that Dr. Hobbs' Sparagus Kidney Pills have won signal victory in the great public test at Columbus and that it is daily winning golden opinions from the press, the pulpit, the public and the medical profession in every part of this country.



DR. JULIUS HOBBS.

It is a discovery of incalculable value to all mankind, and stamps Dr. Hobbs as one of the greatest discoverers of the age, and we are not surprised that every medical man in the country feels proud to honor his name.

A Doctor Talks.

"It isn't the remedies in the Pill," said a doctor, "that would make them so efficacious, for every physician and every druggist knows that Asparagus, Buchu, Juniper Berries, Uva Ursi, Pareira Brava, Corn Silk and the like are healing and strengthening to the urinary organs, but it is in the process by which the Hobbs' people concentrate and combine them that the secret of their success lies. They are the only patent medicine people who publish their formulas to the world. I am using them successfully on two of my patients now."

"A Good Tonic."

Lewis H. Smith, Schroder's Hotel, Columbus, O., says: "Dr. Hobbs' Kidney Pills are a good tonic and kidney medicine. I have taken them for some time and have found in them much relief."

"Have Helped Me Wonderfully."

Dr. Hobbs' Sparagus Kidney Pills have helped me wonderfully. I have been afflicted with kidney trouble for some time. They are a splendid medicine, and I will take pleasure in recommending them.

Christmas In a Foreign Land.

The great hall was gay with holly and Christmas greens. It was snowing outside for the first time that year, and the huge fireplace was full of logs blazing and snapping in a splendidly cheerful way. Dinner was to be earlier than usual. A great festivity was going on in the servants' hall, and when Warford went out with Lady Mary to cut the great Christmas [illegible] and have the health drunk, Betty and Elizabeth went, too, and everybody stood up and cheered and cried, "Merry Christmas! NERVOUS DISEASES.

As a cure for every class of Nervous Diseases, no remedy has been able to compare with the Nervine Tonic, which is very pleasant and harmless in all its effects upon the youngest child or the oldest and most delicate individual. Nine tenths of all the ailments to which the human family is heir are dependent on nervous exhaustion and impaired digestion. When there is an insufficient supply of nerve food in the blood, a general state of debility of the brain, spinal marrow, and nerves is the result. Starved nerves, like starved muscles, become strong when the right kind of food is supplied; and a thousand weaknesses and ailments disappear as the nerves recover. As the nervous system must supply all the power by which the vital forces of the body are carried on, it is the first to suffer for want of perfect nutrition. Ordinary food does not contain a sufficient quantity of the kind of nutriment necessary to repair the wear our present mode of living and labor imposes upon the nerves. For that reason it becomes necessary that a nerve food be supplied. This South American Nervine has been found by analysis to contain the essential elements out of which nerve tissue is formed. This accounts for its universal adaptability to the cure of all forms of nervous derangement.

To the Great South American Medicine Co.:
DEAR GENTS:—I desire to say to you that I have suffered for many years with a very serious disease of the stomach and nerves. I tried every medicine I could hear of, but nothing done me any appreciable good until I was advised to try your Great South American Nervine Tonic and Stomach and Liver Cure, and since using several bottles of it I must say that I am surprised at its wonderful powers to cure the stomach and general nervous system. If everyone knew the value of this remedy as I do you would not be able to supply the demand.

REBECCA WILKINSON, of Brownsvalley, Ind., says: "I had been in a distressed condition for three years from Nervousness, Weakness of the Stomach, Dyspepsia, and Indigestion, until my health was gone. I would advise every weakly person to use this valuable and lovely remedy; a few bottles of it has cured me completely. I consider it the grandest medicine in the world."

A Dirty Gang of Tramps.

Seventeen of the dirtiest, toughest looking tramps that have been lodged in this city during the winter were kept at the Hotel Carlos over Friday night. Two of the men, who happened to be clean, were taken into the prison and allowed to remain there.

Their knives were all taken away from them, and were returned to the hobos when they were released this morning. The men were contrary and sullen. Officer Munsell compelled them to carry out the slop bucket, but all silently left the Carlos and paid no attention to their orders. He made one return and get the bucket, and then all were given orders to leave the city. Of the entire seventeen only one asked permission to wash, and he was one of the men allowed to sleep in the prison.

WALKING'S GOOD TODAY

The Engine at the Power House Breaks and Stops Street Cars.

Everybody walked today, and more than one residing on the outskirts of the city were late in getting to their business places on account of waiting for a car that did not come. Such affairs as the accident of today make the residents of Marion appreciate the street railway lines.

When the cars were run in Friday night it was discovered that the engine at the power house was broken and could not be fixed today, and perhaps the company will not be able to have the engine repaired so that cars can be run Sunday. Today was a good day to walk, and since the engine had to break it could not have done so at a more convenient time for the people.

The Strobel Manufacturing works and the electric elevators of the city were unable to run on account of the accident.

BLACKLISTING

Dealt a Blow by the Decision of a Damage Suit.

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 7.—In sustaining the verdict awarded Mrs. Zeriah P. Jaynes for $1000 damages against J. A. Sell and the Merchants Retail Commercial agency, of Chicago, a collecting agency, the supreme court this evening dealt "blacklisting" a knock-out blow. Sell was a coal dealer at Delaware, and tried to collect $12.20 from Mrs. Jaynes on a bill she denied owing.

The Commercial Agency sent her a number of threatening letters, and she was finally "blacklisted" by the storekeepers who were members of the agency of Delaware. Mrs. Jaynes sued for damages and got a judgment for $5000. This was reduced to $1000 and afterward sustained.

SCHOOL NOTES.

The Irving society is still at work on its Washington's birthday entertainment, and a very interesting program is to be rendered.

The reviews of the term will commence next week. Much interest is being taken in the school work and especially the review work.

Miss Chub, a teacher in the Delaware city schools, was in the city Friday and visited the schools of this city. She was very well pleased with the schools here.

There is only one month more of this term. It has passed quickly and much interest has been taken in all of the rooms, and the attendance and health has been very good.

The Longfellows will have extra literary exercises next Friday afternoon and will entertain the Irving society. The Irving society will not hold any exercises, but will visit the Longfellows.

All of the literary exercises were fine Friday afternoon and quite a number of visitors were in attendance. These exercises are not only profitable but they are a relief from the dull routine of school work.

THE EYE BURST

R. M. Imbody Undergoes a Successful Surgical Operation.

Readers of the Star will recall the item in its Thursday issue in regard to the probability that it would be found necessary to remove the eye of R. M. Imbody, who was being treated at Forest, within twenty-four hours.

The operation was commenced Friday by Dr. Gimmel, of Forest, assisted by Dr. Wynn, but as soon as the eye was touched it burst, so terrible was its condition.

The surgeons proceeded with the operation and completed it in eight minutes, and within thirty minutes Mr. Imbody was out from under the influence of the anesthetic which had been administered.

At this writing Mr Imbody is much relieved and his speedy restoration to health is now expected.

While the loss of his eye is a serious one to Mr. Imbody, he may congratulate himself that he has escaped much pain and that his remaining eye is no longer in danger of being affected.

Mr. Wilson Imbody stated to a Star man today that the trouble was not caused by the heat from the tile kilns, at which his son had worked, but resulted from a cold taken while camping out on a hunting trip.

A QUEER FAMILY.

Pigs and Puppies Live Together on the Most Friendly Terms.

Chris Campbell, who resides north of the city, has a female specimen of canine that is raising a very unique family. The family consists of three dogs and two suckling pigs. The dogs and pigs are given equal attention and care by the mother of the dogs and play and romp together in the most friendly terms.

Mr. Campbell had this queer family in the city the other evening, and they attracted a great deal of attention. He expects to raise them together until they are grown and then train the pigs to be as docile as the dogs.

Absolutely the Lowest Prices, Always.

EVERY day thus far in 1896 our sales have been handsomely in excess of the corresponding time in 1895 or that of any other year in the history of this business. Never have our great January sales received such satisfactory patronage, never has there distribution of goods been anywhere nearly as large as during the month just past. We believe that the above results have been made possible because the enormous purchasing public is recognizing more substantially the full truth of our frequently repeated statement, viz: "Our Prices are Absolutely the Lowest." We can afford to make no mistake upon this point.

Again our great stocks are conspicuously the largest and best assorted in Marion, and in this period of gross exaggeration in newspaper advertising, when nearly every published statement is intended by its writer to be liberally discounted, we insist even more positively than ever that our advertising shall be free from every word or sentence which can mislead, and that we insist even more positively than ever that our advertising shall be free from every word or sentence which can mislead, and that "Our Advertisements Can Be Thoroughly Depended Upon in Every Particular."
